‘Transform or bust: Embracing resilience and sustainability’

Westminster
5 October 2022

Dear Colleague,

We are proud to announce our XXV Anniversary Celebratory Event – two years later than planned in a post pandemic environment and all the more remarkable for it.

The IAG was established over 27 years ago and it has transformed since then from an informal network, of a small number of heads of internal audit, to what it is today: a highly valued forum for internal audit and related governance professionals in over 100 organisations. Run wholly by volunteers from those organisations and fuelled only by passion, enthusiasm and support from all our colleagues, including all our expert speakers over the years; this achievement is no mean feat.

We don't – and never have – taken our success for granted. We recognise that our continued viability and sustainability relies on our commitment to our core purpose of advancing our profession and of championing high standards of governance. We shall remain focused on creating a learning environment where thinking differently is encouraged, where asking the tough questions is valued, and where talent is nurtured and grown.

We have organised this extraordinary one-day Conference to mark our milestone, followed by a celebratory evening reception at The House of Lords, hosted by Lord Smith of Kelvin KT. Lord Smith is an honorary Fellow of the CIIA, who chaired the Smith Committee for the FRC's guidance on audit committees in the Combined Code.

We will take the opportunity at our Conference to recognise the mega risk trends impacting our Industry and global economies, and to pose tough questions for future discussions. Our risk landscape has increased significantly in complexity. From geopolitical, climate change, technology and cyber threats to pandemic risks – every aspect of our being as responsible and sustainable corporate citizens is being questioned. It's clear we need to change our thinking more than ever before.

'Transform or bust' could be the new mantra as we progress through this decade. Each of our speakers has been specially selected not just for their expert knowledge but also for their passionate messages for a more resilient and sustainable future. Hence, we have themed our special Conference 'Transformation or bust: Embracing resilience and sustainability'.

On this note, it is only appropriate for us to express our gratitude and acknowledge the time and support already shown by all our eminent speakers in making this event possible.

We look forward to welcoming you at this special celebratory event on Wednesday 5 October 2022, and to your participation and continued support for another 25 years!

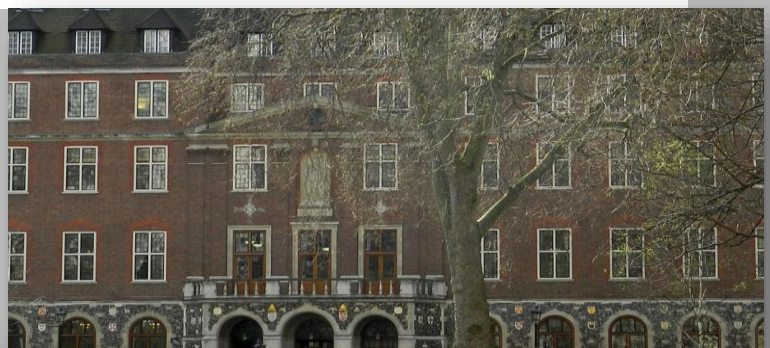

With best wishes,
